Good cooking store, and there are fewer articles in the housekeeping line in which there are so many candidates for popular favor. Among the latest is one for some months jost advertosed in our columns, and which we have had in use a still longer period. It is athed the "American Hot-Air itsas Burning Cocking Store," and taken altogether it is fnoor judgment the resy best cooking store in the market. It has many peculiarities, which perhaps could not be well understood except by an article termination, and our own use of iduring several months has shown us that it is fully enlable of all that is raimed for it. We do not find it lacking in anyone partlenhar of its high reputation, for leadings, so speak—for it affects all the facilities of the range in a remarkable degree. The castings are unusually heavy, and indeed we hardly know of a requisite which is wanting to to make it the best cooking stove now on sale."
